ATLANTA: Making its debut this September, the Fandemic Dead tour is bringing "The Walking Dead" to life where it all began in downtown Atlanta. Produced by former CEO of Wizard World, John Macaluso, Fandemic Dead is a three-day event where fans will have the opportunity to meet their favorite celebrity cast members, producers, cosplayers, and artists, as well as learn more about pop culture as a whole. With more than 20 notable names and faces already announced on the weekend roster, Fandemic Dead is a fan dream for more reasons than just the lineup.

"Atlanta is the birthplace of 'The Walking Dead' series, so it only feels right to experience this here. I can't wait to gather all of the cast members, creators and fans together in such a meaningful place," said Macaluso, Fandemic Tour CEO. "Following Dragon Con, we're excited to be one of the first, larger, in-person events back on the books for Atlanta. We can already feel the support especially from diehard fans who have already helped spread the word about our convention."

After 11 seasons, four spinoff series and the announcement of a spin-off film, Fandemic Dead will bring current and former cast members of "The Walking Dead" back together for Q&A sessions, photo ops, autographs, and discussion panels to give fans an exclusive insight into "The Walking Dead" Universe.
